NEW PARK ROUTE OBTAINED BY CITY

Town of Janesville Acts to Give Citizens New Riverside Entrance.

Immediate construction of a permanent entrance to Riverside park at the south end of the big tract opposite Oak Hill cemetery is assured through action taken by the board of the town of Janesville at a special meeting held Monday. The township officials, acting upon the petition of the city of Janesville, unanimously adopted a resolution declaring certain streets of the town of Janesville, including Burnside, Wood street and Burns avenue, public highways on the condition that the city will pay for their construction and maintenance so long as it is necessary as an approach to Riverside park from the city limits.

City Manager Henry Traxler was gratified over the action of the board and declared that work on the permanent entrance roadway will be started at once.

The new entrance to the town begins at Washington street, near the end of the trolley line. It will pass the south side of the Collins house, situated on a diagonal due north-west to the south end of the park. The old right-of-way running by the north side of the Collins house will be abandoned.

The present plan comprehends the construction of a wide piece of gravel road, well oiled and maintained. It is expected that the new entrance to the park will be a fine piece of building the road-way through a tract, which though platted before, has never been fitted up with a thoroughfare.

The action of the board on Monday was the climax of several weeks of legal proceedings in which City Attorney Roger G. Cunningham has been working.

The tract through which the entrance will run lies outside the corporate limits of Janesville. Platted by the town of Janesville, Jan. 21, 1893, the addition extends from the city limits north for one-fourth of a mile. Its map bears the names of several streets which the majority of people were never aware existed.

Old maps have been ferreted out by City Engineer C. V. Korch to prepare for surveying and staking the road as a public highway.

NEW BOND ISSUE RUSH COMPLETION BEFORE COUNCIL OF 5 MILE STRIP

Work on Concrete Between Footville and Orfordville Goes Forward.

A crew of 50 men working under the supervision of the Rock county highway commissioner, Charles E. Moore, is completing the concrete work on the five mile stretch between Footville and Orfordville on state trunk highway 20.

All work preliminary to laying of the ribbon of concrete which, when completed, will join the communities of Janesville, Footville, Orfordville and Brodhead, will have been completed by Monday night. County Highway Commissioner Charles E. Moore said today. Moving the center of operations to the new location a quarter of a mile from Footville, has occupied the attention of the crew since last Tuesday when the road was completed to the village.

More than two and a half miles of track have been laid from the Greble gravel pit, towards Orfordville, and with much better hauling conditions than before, a larger amount of concrete is expected to be laid daily. An average of 500 feet has been maintained thus far this season. Amicable settlement of the claims of James Murphy and Matt Mulcahy on strips of land from their property needed in laying out 20 over the new route have been made, and Labors and Son are now grading that stretch, a distance of 10 rods. The top fill on the Hanover marsh project will be fixed. This stretch is 2,500 feet long and is the largest the county department has had.

Teaching English to the Alien

Some day we shall have to face the music squarely and confront the illiteracy question without flinching. There are 700,000 illiterates in New York city alone—adults who have never learned to read or write English. "Illiteracy" now is used in an official sense to indicate those who cannot read or write in any language. There are two million foreign born residents in New York. They are being naturalized at the rate of 40,000 annually. The New York Council on Immigrant Education reports that the work of the bureau has been so great as to be impossible to keep pace with immigration. Since we have finally acquired backbone enough to pass the restriction law it will be possible to make inroads on the immigrant army and give it attention.

But we have always dodged the teaching of English. The war brought us many revelations. We found that a few counties, and some cities, were keeping their records in another language. We found the foreign language press an entrenched power. It has grown since then. There is only one way to combat this influence and that is by the compulsory use of English. If the immigrant wants to remain here, English is the national language of the United States. Its history and its traditions, its constitution and its laws are written in English. If we emigrated to Germany in large numbers we should certainly not expect the German nation to adopt our language but make us know German. So of Italy or any other nation.

We need the citizenship that has understanding. While of course there is the illiterate immigrant, and the foreign born residents who do not speak English, we have that other extreme, the old residents descended from long lines of American families, who may be able to speak a provincial kind of English, but who also are densely ignorant. We refer particularly to the white mountaineers of the Alleghenies and the Blue Ridge and the "crackers" of other southern states. They need as much missionary work as do the immigrant. Also the south again comes in for criticism of illiteracy and neglect of its citizens in the colored population who add to the percentage of ignorance, while in the border states we have herds of Mexicans who may vote but who can neither read nor write and only speak "spiggoty."

If we apply illiteracy as meaning a failure to know how to read or write English we would have some ten million illiterates in America. There should not be half that number in the next ten years. It is time now to get at the problem. Here in our own city we have too many persons who do not know how to read or write in any language, but we have never done a thing about it. It is time we took this condition out of that of mere shrugging of the shoulders into the realm of action of another sort.

Tourists are struck with the wonderful scenery we have on our billboards.

Putting Padlocks on Highbrow Places

Some of the thin-skinned persons who write for the newspapers are quite upset at the audacity of the government officials in even proposing to put a padlock on the home of the rich and gay and fashionable—the Ritz hotel in New York—as one of the consequences for violation of the liquor prohibition laws.

But why not? How comes it that such a place should be immune and another where money is not so much displayed, is locked up? It seems to the man up a tree that this is the place where the fight should begin, not end. If there were not so many Ritzes there would be less importation of liquor and rum runners would be less in evidence off the New York 12 mile limit. The little ones see the big ones getting away with violations and the law breaks down and the New York newspapers at once chronicle the failure of prohibition. Closing a few high brow places will have a tendency to correct New York's moral staidness. Also a few real jail with locks and bars. In Wisconsin we have very few of them. Here the sheriff may take his friend prisoners out to a restaurant for meals and give them a walk in the park under our most beneficent parole law. It may remove the poignancy from punishment, but as a corrective is a failure.

Leopold was a student of birds. He can look Crowe over very carefully.

Never Again and Not for Us

New York city is about to ask the republicans to hold a national convention there in 1928. It will not be accepted. New York has demonstrated fully that it is not a place to hold a convention and its invitation would be considered with the same interest others coming from London, Naples, Ekaterinoslav or Dublin. The New York Times says that all the bad things predicted about a convention took place there and New York not only lost the friendship of a large part of America, but a republican convention would remove what lingering friendships there are still left. The Times is right. In New York state, neither the democrats nor the republicans will hold a state convention in the metropolis. It is taboo. Also it may be understood that no other democratic convention will be held there if the party should exist for a century. The only man nominated in New York prior to Davis was overwhelmingly defeated.

Direct Nomination of Presidents

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Washington—One of the results of the recent record-breaking democratic national convention has been a decided impetus to the movement for the direct nomination of candidates for the presidency and vice presidency. The question is certain to be raised at the next session of congress and to be given more serious consideration than it has ever before received.

It is possible that the country has witnessed its last great convention contest over the selection of a national ticket.

Before such a change can be brought about that presidential nominees will be chosen in a direct, nation-wide primary it will be necessary to have a constitutional amendment adopted. That is necessarily a slow process. However, with a formidable public sentiment demanding the change the necessary steps can be taken in less than four years.

Democratic leaders who went through the stormy sessions in Madison Square Garden are practically unanimous in saying that they never want to undergo such an experience again. It is too much wear and tear on physical strength, too nerve-racking, and too hard on the pocketbook.

Nor do they ever want to see their party again subjected to such an ordeal. It breeds factionalism, engenders bitterness not soon to be forgotten and leaves wounds that may never be healed. Indeed, some of the leaders say frankly that with another such convention there probably wouldn't be any democratic party left and that it will be fortunate to survive this one. They do not make such statements openly, for they do not wish to contribute in any way to the possible disastrous consequences of this recent convention, but they do not disguise the fact that they are interested in the direct nomination idea.

So long as there are conventions to select candidates, just that long there will be the possibility of contests similar to the one we have had the same day and at the same place, the one just fought out in New York. Having all national delegates selected by direct primary and not to be elected by caucus, for it is not to be expected that any candidate could capture a majority of all such delegates and in the end the convention would have to make the choice.

With an amendment to the federal constitution authorizing it to do so, congress could pass a law providing for a presidential primary. Such a law, presumably, would provide that a candidate's name would go on the ballot by petition, with a requirement that the petition must have the signatures of a substantial percentage of the electors of the candidate's party at the last preceding election. This would guard against a multiplicity of candidates who had no appreciable popular strength. Then with all parties voting on the same day and at the same place, the candidate receiving a majority of the total vote cast by his party would unquestionably be the choice of the rank and file of his party and he could not be jobbed out of the nomination through the manipulations of bosses and powerful interests that frequently control conventions.

Opponents of the primary idea point out, however, that with a number of candidates in the field no one of them would be likely to receive a majority of the total vote. If the nomination were to the one receiving the largest number of votes—a plurality—the result might be the selection of a man who was in reality the choice of a relatively small minority of his party. For example, with a total party vote of, say, twenty million, ten candidates might so divide that vote that a man receiving barely a fraction over two million would have a plurality.

Advocates of the primary answer this by saying that the law should provide for both first and second choice expressions by the voters, and that in event no candidate received a clear majority in first choice votes, the one who received the greatest number of both first and second choice votes should be declared the nominee.

To the objection that the primary would favor the candidate with the most money to spend in a preliminary campaign, answer is made that expenditures would be limited in such a manner that money could never become the controlling factor in the primary.

It is also pointed out that the convention system tends itself to control by money more easily than any primary could be similarly controlled.

As a matter of fact thoughtful leaders recognize that there are objections both to the convention and the primary method of nomination and to any other that has ever been suggested. No system is perfect. The thing to do, they say, is to adopt the one that is least objectionable and that affords the best guarantee that the fundamental ideal and purpose of a democracy will be conserved—that the popular will shall prevail.

In the recent democratic convention the nomination did not go to the candidate who had the greatest popular following in the party, but to one who, when the convention assembled, didn't have a delegate except a handful from his own state. In 1920, Harding had no appreciable national strength when he went into the republican nomination contest.

Another thing that is causing party leaders to think seriously of a presidential primary nationwide in character, or at least of some way of modifying the present convention system, is their knowledge of what usually happens to a party after an unusually bitter convention fight. In 1912 the republican party was almost completely wrecked as a result of the battle at Chicago. In that same year democracy suffered as a result of its Baltimore convention fight. True, Woodrow Wilson was elected, but his vote was far short of the normal strength of his party and if the republicans had not been so disastrously split the Princeton statesman never would have been in the White House except as a guest.

This year the republicans had a perfectly amiable convention, so far as the naming of a ticket was concerned, but there were differences of opinion over the platform such that La Follette is heading a revolt. The democrats came through their tempestuous session without an open split in their ranks, and with McAdoo and other defeated candidates seeking their support to Davis, but all there are ominous something in the air that does not promise well for party solidarity at the election.

Incidentally, the democratic gathering in Madison Square Garden, with its 24 sessions and 103 ballots, cost almost a million dollars.

His name is even forgotten of men. But the bitterness of disappointment for the democrats of the nation will live and be passed on to the third and fourth generation.

The Jugo-Slav premier has resigned. It is to be hoped the next one will have a name we can pronounce here. The old one sounded much like a list of names of arrested bootleggers.

The refusal of Grant D. Harrington to be again a candidate for the office of county clerk of Walworth county is regrettable, though his reasons are unanswerable. Serving his county for more than 20 years as an official he has built for himself an army of friendships by his attention to duty and his personal care of the details of the office. He has been both a worker and a leader. It is pleasant to know that he will still be a resident of Walworth county, at least in the summer. It would be too much to believe that he could get far away from the trout and the other game fish of Wisconsin for any length of time.

Now all that Bob lacks is Gaston Means as a campaign manager for Wheeler.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE PURPOSE

"Why do you peddle your fruit?" said I to a huckster of melons who wandered by.
 "Why do you shout from the dawn to gloam?" said he. "For the wife and the kids at home."
 "Why do you dig in the ditch?" I asked.
 Of a grimy laborer, sorely tasked.
 And this was the reason such work he did:
 "I gotta da wife. I gotta da kid!"

On they went down the busy street,
 Baker toilers with hurrying feet;
 Butcher, baker and banker grave,
 Why do they work and why do they save?

What is it moves them to work and plan?
 What is the motive of every man?

Stop and ask him what holds him fast,
 Dreaming and striving to serve at last,
 Polished speech or an ancient quarrel,
 This is the purpose that you shall hear.

Rich shall tell, as the digger did:
 "I gotta da wife. I gotta da kid!"

This is the purpose which rules us all,
 Home and the wife and the children small.

HOROSCOPE

TUESDAY, JULY 22, 1924.

At last astrologers force a truly lucky day. They find that, in this configuration, Jupiter, Mercury and Neptune are all friendly. Uranus is adverse late in the evening.

Business and professional matters are subject to delay, but not to disaster. There is a time to push all sorts of enterprises, especially those involving real initiative.

Merchants and manufacturers should benefit and they should find bankers less adamant than in recent weeks.

New projects of international importance are prognosticated and they will become sources of international complications as well as personal profit.

The signing of agreements or contracts of any sort is held fortunate with this planetary configuration prevails.

Land leaders have an especially good direction of the stars today and there is an aspect promising to novel colonization schemes.

Judgment should be used and minds well balanced while X-pole is in this day's aspect which makes for clear thinking and wise planning.

Profit for the oil industry again is foretold, but the seers predict many fluctuations in stocks.

This should be a fortunate time for starting on an ocean voyage but not for leaving a ship as moving back and forth between the United States and Europe.

The next race problem to be presented to the government of this country probably will have something to do with Spain and its government.

All the signs indicate plots and intrigues in which religious prejudice is strong and peril is foreseen by occultists in a return to ancient intolerance.

Persons whose birthdate is 1 have the luxury of a happy year in which money and opportunity will be satisfactory.

Children born on this day will be quick, keen and exceedingly well-balanced. These subjects of Leo usually rise rapidly in life and enjoy all the good things that come with success.

NEWSPAPER TALK

"Senator La Follette, the man who made Wisconsin famous," says the Providence Journal, in quoting Bob's reference to the "desperate struggle for the average man and woman." The Rhode Island paper is slightly out of date. Senator La Follette may have made Wisconsin famous, but what is keeping Wisconsin famous is not a senator, but a lady, or three of them. The Journal, the paper and the Guinness record and their sisters are keeping Wisconsin famous just now, and pilgrims come to her borders every day from far states, to worship at the shrine of Wisconsin's goddess, the dairy cow.—Wausau Record Herald.

COSTIVENESS IN INFANTS

In a number of recent talks bearing on the evil habit of drying babies with medical or surgical means, we have tried to emphasize one important, if unpopular, fact, namely, that the impulse to inflict upon the baby the first dose of medicine or surgery is the result of ignorance of the cause of the trouble. There was a rumor floating around in the newspapers recently that a class of college girls in Minnesota—where education is epidemic—had a baby and members of the class were taking turns caring for the baby under the direction of an expert. This sort of thing was news because it seemed so novel and unusual for young women to learn anything about the intelligent care of an infant in school. Our schools are funny when you come to consider how they stall along without teaching anything human.

The usual cause of constipation in infants is inadequate food, and the sensible way to prevent or remedy the trouble is by seeing to it that the infant shall receive adequate food, not physic. The cause for the excessive little intelligence and pains to select and prepare the food for the infant is artificially fed; indolent parents prefer to rely on castor oil.

A breast fed baby ordinarily has two or three movements daily. A bottle baby ordinarily has but one movement daily, and sometimes skips a day. Even this one movement, in the first few months of artificial feeding, is usually small and dry. The mother must learn to resist that evil impulse to play the baby with physic. The bowel function will be helped or stimulated to better purpose by gradual increase in the strength of the milk modification and the gradual additions made to the baby's diet in the course of a few months. The mother should be aware of the fact that the baby's diet is the cause of the mischief, not the suggestions of the unprofessional nurse, simple constiveness in a baby is not a sufficient excuse. Constiveness does not lead to any serious illness. At the worst it is the less of two evils, when the alternative is physic, suppository or enema.

Costiveness in the nursing infant is usually due to inadequate food, too much open air exercise. The mother probably needs more fresh fruit and more fresh vegetables and green salad or relishes in her diet. The nursing mother should deny herself no article of diet which is ordinarily considered wholesome to eat. She must learn to laugh at the superstitions. Too often is the educated about this. It Happens Every Day

There was quite a scene at the Thompsons' the other evening—when Mrs. Thompson discovered that she had lost her diamond bar pin, the one her husband had given her for a wedding present. Mr. Thompson probably had the hardest time of anybody, because he had both his wife and the lost pin on his hands, so to speak. Next day he said he had thought the hardest job would be to find the pin, but that really was easier than getting his wife calmed down.

First of all, he said, he gave Mrs. Thompson a liberal application of smelling salts and persuaded her to "lie down for a while."

Then he told her about all the people he could recall, who had lost things and had them returned. This didn't seem to be very convincing, he admitted.

And then he called 2500.

And the next day a man, with a Gazette, opened to the lost and found ads in the classified section—under his arm and Mrs. Thompson's pin in his pocket, called at the house—and the sun came out again!

That evening Mr. Thompson said, "I told you so," and added under his breath—"but I didn't believe it myself!"

NOW IS THE TIME FOR ALL GOOD MEN TO SWAT THE FLY

Swat the fly. That is the call being sounded by Dr. L. J. Woodworth, city sanitary inspector, and acting health officer in the absence of Dr. Fred Welch.

"Flies are one of the worst enemies of man," said Dr. Woodworth, "and breed prolifically and prosper in filth. Their conformation is admirably suited for carrying death-dealing organisms from questionable places which they frequent, to the dwelling places, food utensils and food of man. Flies are a nuisance and anyone who fights them is doing humanity a service."

"No Pleasant Thing," continued Dr. Woodworth, "is covered with a hairy growth and its feet resemble hairy paws. It probably carries as much filth and as many bacteria on its body for its size as anything which lives. No wonder then, considering this point, that flies are an enemy of clean milk. The fly is a creature of filthy habits. It sucks its food without fear or favor and then regurgitates it at will."

Dr. Woodworth stressed the importance of keeping flies away from milk, particularly during the hot summer months. Much of the illness of children during this period, he said, may be attributed to milk which has been infected by flies.

"Smooth surface milk utensils is often a handy place for the fly to land, special precaution should be taken to keep them clean."

"Swat 'em now," Dr. Woodworth explained, and will become more important during August and September.

"The importance then of swatting the fly during the breeding stage," he continued, "is obvious. It is a determined effort upon the part of everybody to reduce the number of the pests much disease can be prevented."

Flies are in the breeding stage at this time of the year, Dr. Woodworth explained, and will become more numerous during August and September.

STORM OF WIND AND HEAVY RAIN DOES SOME DAMAGE

Lighted their homes, shut off on account of the storm.

Rock river water rose considerably by the rush of water that poured down the hillsides of Janesville streets, in many instances carrying in its wake, sand and gravel at times as large as a man's fist. Large and small limbs were torn off trees and fell on streets and sidewalks.

Hundreds of persons out motoring in the usual Sunday exodus from the city were drenched, when automobiles stalled.

22 Transformers Out

The crews of the Janesville Electric company were busy Sunday night and Monday repairing the work of the storm. Twenty-two transformers in the city blown out by the storm were replaced. Trouble on the Milton line caused by trees crossing wires which put the village of Milton and Milton Junction in darkness were repaired at 9:30 p. m. in Janesville.

The primary high voltage lines were broken in several places. These lines were broken at the Edgerton sub-station with no cessation in services.

Lashed by a gale-like wind and accompanied by sharp lightning, a severe electrical storm broke over Janesville and southern Wisconsin shortly before 6 p. m. Sunday, continuing most of its damage to telephone and electric light and power wires.

The storm was brewed by a day of stifling humidity and dead air. The temperature reached 85 degrees, but the sky opened and dropped 20 degrees following the rain. The humidity came back on Monday with 83 degrees temperature at noon and indications of another storm.

Heavy Rainfall

In two hours, Sunday night, an inch and a half of rain fell, filling streets with rushing water.

Approximately 100 cases of telephone trouble was reported in the city by the Wisconsin Bell Telephone company, the largest number of such cases this year.

Damage was caused by lightning ground wires and water getting into cable pits. Damage is expected to be repaired by Tuesday.

There were a few cases of trouble on long-distance telephone wires, south and west of Janesville, due to lightning.

Plumed Field

Reports from Wisconsin communities Monday indicated that the torrent of rain that fell Sunday night had flattened large fields of grain and corn but had not caused any permanent damage. Information to this effect was received from towns southeast of Janesville, where the storm was worst.

North of Janesville little rain fell until late evening and motorists coming from Madison were surprised to find the road so dry.

As close as Leyden fair weather prevailed. Campers on Rock river and near-by lakes were inconvenienced by the heat of the sun and the heavy rain.

The horses of Lathers and Son, doing the grading work on highway 20, near Orfordville, was blown down.

Clinton Lights Out

Clinton was put in darkness until 10:30, when limbs fell across wires and disconnected the circuits.

The tobacco shed owned by George Wolff, on the west side of the Madison filling station, on East Main street, Evansville, was struck by lightning during the storm and was destroyed, with a loss of $1,000. The barn, containing four tons of tobacco shed and barn combined and had just been filled with new hay valued at $200. The pouring rain failed to extinguish the fire, and the efforts of the Evansville fire department also were in vain. Insurance of $100 was carried.

SWAT THE WEEDS AND SAVE CROPS

Stringent Action Being Taken to Reduce Menace of Weeds.

"Swat the Weed" is the order of the day in five of the progressive counties of upper Wisconsin.

Weed commissioners and county chairmen have joined in presenting a solid front in their attack on the persistent enemies of crop production.

Already meetings have been held at Ashland for Bayfield, Iron and Ashland counties with V. E. Brubaker, Bayfield county agent, and M. H. Wright, Ashland county agent, in charge; at Phillips for Price county with H. J. Hahnlow, county agent, in charge; and at Medford for Taylor county with R. A. Kolb, county agent, in charge.

At these meetings special weed days were arranged. Ashland and Bayfield counties had their weed day on July 19. Price county had a weed day on July 8, and Taylor county had its special day on July 11. On these days the co-operation of all the citizens of the county was sought in cleaning up patches of weeds wherever found.

According to G. M. Briggs of the agronomy department of the state agricultural college and supervisor of the county agents in this section, these upper Wisconsin counties are in no way covered with weeds as are many of the southern and older counties in the state, but the farmers desire to prevent further distribution of weeds.

They want to keep the tax burden imposed by weed eradication as far away as possible and at the same time be able to produce seeds free from noxious weed seeds.

A. L. Stone, weed specialist of the Wisconsin college of agriculture, spoke at all the meetings of the state and explained in detail the powers and duties of the weed commissioners. In addition he conducted weed eradication clinics, and placed considerable emphasis on the dangers of the further importation of weed seeds.

Stone emphasized the importance of having seed of good purity only, and urged the buying of seed from reputable seed companies. Where there is any question of quality, he urged the farmers to send samples to the state seed laboratory for inspection.

An educational program of weed control will be carried on all during the summer. The state seed laboratory, according to Briggs, it will consist of more identification and control measures taught in the schools, more care exercised by the county agents in the field, and co-operation with threshermen in the cleaning of machinery, and more co-operation of neighbors in united control for the community's sake.

YOUTHS WARNED OF DEATH PENALTY BUT MAKE PLEA

Their behalf by Mr. Darrow. Leopold was called first to the bar of the court and asked this question:

"Knowing that the court may sentence you to death for a term of years, do you still desire to plead guilty?"

"Yes," was the response.

"You are in the presence of the statement of the state's attorney after the morning's proceedings following:

"Leopold is nothing left for Leah and Leopold to do but plead guilty. The proof was so overwhelming that no jury could obtain a verdict except one of guilty."

The crime was so cold-blooded, premeditated and atrocious that no jury could fix any other punishment except death. There is only one proper punishment—that is death, and I shall insist on the extreme penalty as a matter of course."

Late this afternoon, Sheriff Hoffman announced that extra guards had been assigned to the cells of the youths to preclude an attempted suicide.
